NEW-YORK FAMILY OR HOUSEHOLD MARKETS. [Reported for The Tribune ]

The long and severe drouth has been attended with its Corn is sickly and yellow, and rolls itself up like tobacco, as if trying to preserve its leaves from the scorching rays of the sun. The Fruits languish and the delicious Ber-saif trying to preserve its leaves from the scorching rays of the sun. The Fruits languish and the delicious Berries wither and come to a too early maturity. Within the last week a few scanty cars of new Corn have come in, but they were generally poor and meager. These are the only new vegetables that have made their appearance in addition to those noticed in our last.

The present is a kind of resting time, as it would appear for plants and truits as well as men. Every thing stems to shrink beneath the hot, arid glance of the sun. The sy is like brass, the air hot and suffocating, and the country whither so many rush to escape the heats of summer, appears to sympsthize with the fervid skies summer, appears to sympsthize with the fervid skies and the reflect their intense and blinding glare. The sient processes of nature still go on, but outwardly the present is to the farmer a season of patient reliance and expectation. The wheat field ripens and adds one golden to reward the toils of the husbandman with their grateful fruits. Meanwhile the wide world seems to sleep—the caute pant in the noontide sun, and even the little stream let adown the meadow forgets her laughter as she sees the poor flowers drooping and pining above her bosom.

quoting the price of Cattle and misrepresenting the state of the market have not been without their results. To day we find a fair share of the Beef in the stalls to have come from the near vicinity of the City, while the mar-ket is a good deal crowded with Ohio and other Cattle from a distance, which remain undisposed of. The price too for poor descriptions has gone lower, and quoations range from 41 to 61 per lb. Good Beef is worth 6), and some very fine has brought 61 cents per ib. It is
